DINING

➤ Turkey Town

Everyone knows that the holidays can be stressful. Thanksgiving in particular brings out the worst — the visiting relatives, the football games (both played and watched), the fear of what to do when the alcohol runs out — it's enough to send the most spirited host over the edge. But there's one Thanksgiving headache you should never worry about: the meal. Take the pressure off and treat yourself to a holiday feast, exquisitely prepared by someone else. These gourmet options will not let you down. —Rachel Bowie

Braeburn

117 Perry St., 212-255-0696

The newest arrival to the West Village restaurant scene, Braeburn offers a Thanksgiving menu built around refined American cuisine, delightfully prepared by Chef Brian Bistrong (formerly of the Harrison and Citarella). Besides the roasted free range turkey, Bistrong offers all natural rib eye, risotto, homemade fanghe and more. Plenty of options for a feast you won't soon forget!
